CLIENT GUIDE

Couples Budget Reset

What to expect before you start, what happens in each session, and what you leave with at the end.

Two-session budgeting support for couples who want clarity without jargon or pressure.

WHAT THIS PACKAGE IS FOR

A calmer way to sort money together

The Couples Budget Reset is designed to help you understand your money situation together, reduce confusion, and leave with a clearer shared plan. It focuses on budgeting support and financial organisation, not regulated advice.

What you can expect

01 A calmer conversation

Sessions reduce pressure and help you both see the same picture more clearly.

02 Practical support

Focus is on getting organised together, not creating a perfect system overnight.

03 Shared priorities

You leave with clear next steps, ownership, and a usable plan.

04 A written summary

After sessions you receive a concise recap of priorities, decisions, and focus points.

What this is not

01 Not regulated financial advice

This does not include investment, pension, tax, or mortgage-product recommendations.

02 Not debt or legal support

Specialist debt, dispute, or legal issues need separate expert help.

03 Not therapy

Sessions focus on money organisation and next steps, not therapeutic support.

04 Not about judgement

You do not need to arrive fully organised—the point is to create clarity from where you are now.

Best fit: couples who are doing reasonably well on paper but still feel stretched, disorganised, or stuck when it comes to money.

BEFORE SESSION 1

Start without having it all sorted

You do not need perfect spreadsheets, perfect answers, or a fully organised budget before the first call. The goal is simply to arrive ready to talk honestly about what feels unclear, heavy, or repeatedly postponed.

This first step should feel manageable. The package is designed to create clarity from where you are now, not from some ideal starting point.

01

Book your time

Choose a time that works for both of you if possible so the conversation can begin with shared context.

02

Complete the intake form

Share the basics and a few suggested times. The form is there to make the session easier, not to test how organised you are.

03

Keep preparation light

There is no need to build a perfect system in advance. Light reflection is enough.

04

Arrive ready to talk honestly

It helps to know what feels stressful, confusing, or repeatedly delayed, even if the details are still messy.

Session 1 brings clarity

The first session is designed to slow things down and make the current money picture easier to understand together. It helps both of you see what is really going on before trying to fix everything at once.

01

See the full picture

We bring income, spending, savings, obligations, and current pressures into one shared view so the conversation feels clearer and less scattered.

02

Name what feels heavy

We look at the areas that feel tense, unclear, or repeatedly avoided, so the main pressure points become visible instead of vague.

03

Leave with clearer focus

By the end of the session, you should have a stronger sense of what is causing friction and what needs practical attention next.

MAIN OUTCOME

You leave Session 1 with a shared starting point: a clearer picture of where things stand now, what feels most pressured, and which issues are worth focusing on in Session

HELPFUL REMINDER

This session is about understanding the situation properly. It is not about solving every issue immediately or arriving with a perfect system already in place.

Light follow-through, then a shared plan

Between the sessions, the aim is to keep momentum going without turning the process into heavy homework. Then Session 2 uses that clearer picture to create practical priorities and next steps you can actually use.

Between sessions stays simple

You may receive a few short prompts or follow-up questions. The goal is to keep the important issues visible, not to ask you to build a complete system on your own.

Prompt 1 Keep it light
Brief reflection is enough. You do not need to prepare a perfect spreadsheet or detailed budget before the next call.

Prompt 2 Notice what matters
Pay attention to what still feels urgent, unclear, or most important now that the first conversation has slowed things down.

Prompt 3 Stay realistic
The purpose is practical progress, not a perfect reset overnight. Session 2 will help turn that reflection into clearer decisions.

Session 2 turns clarity into action

The second session helps you decide what matters most first, what can wait, and how to turn your intentions into a shared plan that feels manageable in real life.

Outcome 1 Agree the priorities
You identify the few issues that matter most instead of trying to fix everything at once.

Outcome 2 Build a usable plan
You translate those priorities into actions, routines, and habits that fit ordinary life rather than ideal conditions.

Outcome 3 Clarify what happens next
You leave knowing who is doing what, what to focus on first, and what a more organised money rhythm can look like together.

AFTER THE SESSIONS

You leave with something usable

After the package, you receive a written summary designed to make the conversation easier to act on. The goal is not to hand you a dense report. The goal is to leave you with a clearer shared direction you can actually use.

Optional follow-up support is available if you want extra accountability or a lighter-touch check-in after the main package.

01

Priority recap

A reminder of the issues that matter most right now, so the important points stay visible.

02

Next-step summary

A clear record of the actions, agreements, and practical decisions made together.

03

Focus points

Short reminders of the habits, boundaries, or conversations to keep returning to.

04

Follow-up options

If helpful, you can add follow-up check-ins for accountability, continuity, and support as you put the plan into practice.

What this means in practice: you finish the package with clarity, written reinforcement, and a calmer sense of what to do next together.
