Couples Budget Reset

A calm, practical financial coaching package for couples who want more clarity and less friction around money.

Rebuilt source deck • pilot price £99

Practical money clarity without jargon, shame, or another circular conversation.

CORE PROMISE

A calmer way to sort money together

This package is built for couples who do not need a lecture or a spreadsheet overhaul. They need a clear conversation, grounded priorities, and a plan they can actually use.

"I want the sessions to feel personal, practical, and easier to act on than the money conversations most couples keep postponing."

01

No shame, no jargon

The tone is calm and human, so couples can talk honestly about what feels messy without being made to feel behind.

02

Built for real-life pressure

The focus is not theoretical optimisation. It is cash-flow clarity, practical decisions, and less friction in everyday life.

03

Shared clarity, practical next steps

Couples leave with clearer priorities, simple actions, and a more realistic sense of what to do next together.

OFFER STRUCTURE

What the package includes

Everything is designed to feel focused, manageable, and easy to act on rather than overwhelming.

01

Two live coaching sessions

Two guided conversations give the space to understand the current picture and agree a better plan together.

2 × 60 MINUTES

02

Between-session preparation

A few simple prompts help the work stay grounded in real life, without turning it into homework overload.

SIMPLE PROMPTS

03

Written reset summary

After the sessions, the couple receives a concise recap of priorities, next steps, and what to keep focusing on.

CLEAR FOLLOW-THROUGH

04

Optional follow-up support

Couples can add ongoing support later if they want help maintaining momentum after the reset.

FLEXIBLE ADD-ON

SESSION 1

Money clarity starts with the real picture

The first session is designed to slow things down, make the current situation visible, and help both partners understand where the pressure is really coming from.

01 Map the current money picture

Income, spending, savings and obligations are shown together for a clear starting point.

02 Surface the pressure points

We pinpoint where money feels stretched, avoided, or emotionally loaded.

03 Identify the main sources of friction

Patterns that create recurring tension are highlighted to guide next steps.

WHAT THIS SESSION GIVES THEM

A shared starting point

Both partners can see the same financial picture clearly, which reduces confusion and stops the conversation from scattering.

Less hidden pressure

Unspoken worries, recurring pinch points, and low-grade overwhelm are brought into the open in a calmer, more useful way.

Clearer next-session focus

By the end of session one, it is easier to know what needs attention first and what the shared action plan should solve next.

This first conversation is not about solving everything at once. It is about making the situation understandable enough to move forward together.

SESSION 2

Shared action plan

The second session turns a clearer money picture into decisions the couple can actually use: what matters now, what can wait, and what to do next together.

This is where the conversation becomes practical. The goal is not another abstract discussion, but a realistic plan that feels shared, manageable, and clear enough to follow after the call.

01 Agree realistic priorities

The couple narrows the conversation down to the few priorities that matter most right now, instead of trying to solve everything at once.

02 Turn intentions into habits

The discussion becomes practical routines, simple decisions, and manageable habits that fit real schedules and real pressure.

03 Define the next actions clearly

By the end, both partners know what happens next, what to keep focused on, and how to avoid slipping back into another vague money loop.

WHAT THEY LEAVE WITH

A shared written plan, practical next steps, and clearer agreement on how to move forward without one partner carrying all the mental load.

POSITIONING

Why this feels different

The offer feels like calm, first-person support for couples to get organised together — not a corporate programme or regulated advice.

"I want the work to feel personal, practical, and straightforward so couples can move from avoidance into action."

WHAT IT IS

Personal and first-person

Direct, human language so people hear a real coach rather than a brand script.

Coaching-led and practical

Sessions focus on pressure points, clear priorities, and realistic next steps.

Built for capable couples

For people who are sensible and motivated but still feel stretched or stuck.

WHAT IT IS NOT

Not corporate financial language

No hard-sell positioning, fintech jargon, or feeling judged.

Not regulated advice

Budgeting and organisation help — not investment, pension, tax, mortgage, or legal advice.

Not crisis or therapy support

Structured money clarity, not emergency intervention or clinical support.

IDEAL AUDIENCE

Who it is for

This package is designed for couples who are doing many things well already, but still feel stretched, disorganised, or unsure what to prioritise next with money.

It is for people who want the conversation to feel clearer and more constructive, not heavier, more technical, or more pressurised.

01

Busy professionals who need practical clarity

They earn okay money, manage a lot, and want a calmer way to make shared financial decisions without another overcomplicated system.

02

Couples balancing savings, debt, or home goals

They are trying to make progress on real priorities, but day-to-day life keeps getting in the way of a joined-up plan.

03

Partners who keep meaning to sort it out together

They want support that helps them move from vague good intentions into shared clarity, realistic next steps, and less friction around money.
